

Benson Charges Eight Against Plan Unjustified

By BERNARD BRENNER
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson said today that a congressional bill to buy his farm program, if successful, will "unjustifiably" raise food prices and taxes.

Farm bloc forces in the Senate and House are mustering behind a stop-gap bill to reverse Benson's cuts in 1958 price support levels for dairy products, wheat, and feed grains.

The bill was approved, 12-3, Thursday by the Senate Agriculture Committee. A House Agriculture subcommittee Thursday voted 5-0, for a bill reversing the dairy cut. The votes indicated there was little hope for Benson's long-range bid for authority to make ever deeper cuts in farm price supports.

Floor action on the Senate measure is scheduled next week.

"Would Prolong Problems"

Benson denounced the committee's actions in a statement issued after attending a Cabinet meeting this morning. He called the farm bloc moves "unsound" and said that "if sustained, they would do serious damage to our farm people and to all America."

"Unless defeated, they would add unjustifiably to the nation's food and tax bills... (and) prolong still further the problems plaguing agriculture."

Benson renewed his appeal for support of the administration farm program. He said the President has recommended "a sound program" and Congress "will best serve the farmer and the American people by supporting this program and defeating unsound proposals."

Stocks Run Into Profit Taking

NEW YORK (UP)—Stocks ran into profit-taking today after five straight sessions of rising prices. The main list was a scramble of minor gains and losses, although a number of specialties gained or lost a point or more.

Oils were mixed. Standard Oil of California and Standard (New Jersey) eased, while Gulf and Royal Dutch firmed. Sun Oil featured with a gain of a point. Steels lost fractions.

Chrysler rose almost a point in a firm auto group. Du Pont rose 1 but Union Carbide fell a major fraction in the chemicals. Aircrafts favored the downside, although price changes were small.

In the non-ferrous metals, Anaconda and Kennecott eased in the coppers but Phelps Dodge firmed. National Lead jumped more than 1 to highlight this group. Aluminum issues were soft.

New Super Sub to Be Commissioned

VALLEJO, Calif. (UP)—The submarine Grayback, the first of the "capital ships of the future," will be commissioned at 5 p.m. c.s.t. today at Mare Island naval shipyard.

One of the largest subs ever built, the 322 foot long diesel-electric Grayback carries a pair of atomic tipped Regulus II missiles. Flying at twice the speed of sound, they have a range of 1,000 to 1,500 miles.

According to the builder, Chance Vought Aircraft Inc., Dallas, Tex., the Regulus is capable of maneuvering in the air like a manned plane, instead of describing a set arc like a ballistic missile.

"It can go in high—above 60,000 feet or come in low under radar fences," said Chance Vought Vice President Ray C. Blaylock.

"It can fly a dog-leg course to deceive the enemy or avoid his biggest defensive concentrations. No enemy will ever be able to predict where it will come from or how."

The Grayback's commander will be Lt. Cmdr. Hugh G. Nott, 38, Bowling Green, Ohio.

Nott, who described his sub as the "capital ship of the future," said the Grayback is a "sort of transitional phenomenon."

"Missile subs are the successor to the battleship," he said. "With missiles replacing the 16-inch rifles, they will be able to bombard targets from ranges undreamed of by the dreadnaught men."

"It's a stopgap between the conventional submarine and the nuclear powered missile ship of the near future."

Although the Grayback's speed is a secret, Navy officers said it will be "considerably faster than World War II submarines." However, it will be slower than that of nuclear-driven subs.

Stolen Train Rams Through Barricade

TWO RIVERS, Wis. (UP)—A seven-car freight train and its diesel engine were run out of a yard at Manitowish, five miles from here, by an unknown person today and plunged through a barricade at a coal dock alongside Lake Michigan harbor here.

The engine and one freight car plunged into the water. Officials said they were not sure whether anyone was aboard the engine when it plunged into the harbor.

They considered sending a diver to examine the engine.

Police Chief John Brandt said, "We've scoured the area in search of anyone who may have jumped from the engine and we've found none. We're proceeding on the theory that a man is in that engine at the bottom of the harbor."

The engine, belonging to the Chicago and North Western, and the freight cars were sitting in the Calumet yards while crewmen were eating lunch. The crewmen said they did not believe that a railroad employee was in the train when it pulled out of the yards.

The train made the five-mile trip to Two Rivers and hit a dead end at the Rice Coal Co. dock. The engine plunged off the dock, and was followed into the water by the first freight car. A second car was left hanging over the edge of the dock. The other five cars did not go into the water.

Hays Asks Delay in Integration

WASHINGTON (UP)—Rep. Brooks Hays (D-Ark.) introduced yesterday a bill calling for congressional investigation of "all aspects of racial segregation and integration" in public schools.

Hays, who served as mediator between President Eisenhower and Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus in the Little Rock integration difficulties last fall, said the inquiry would give "a breather" in disputes over ending school segregation.

He told a news conference it should be a "signal" to Congress not to "pass any more legislation" on civil rights for the time being. Hays' bill sets up a 14-member bi-partisan committee to make a one-year study of school desegregation problems. He said the committee would recommend various ways of complying with the Supreme Court's 1954 school desegregation decision "that would do the least violence to local customs and attitudes."

Launching of Vanguard Is Delayed

By CHARLES TAYLOR
United Press Staff Correspondent

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UP)—A scheduled launching of the Navy Vanguard missile with another satellite in its nose was postponed today because of "minor technical difficulties."

A brief announcement, released simultaneously here and in Washington, did not say when the launching might be ready. It did not eliminate the chance that a firing of a tiny moon in the Vanguard might be attempted during the weekend.

Two previous attempts to launch a satellite carrying Vanguard ended in failure. The Army got off one satellite—Explorer I—which is now whirling around the earth but met with failure in attempts Wednesday to put up another Explorer.

No Date Set
The Navy said minor technical difficulties precluded a firing during daylight hours today.

"Daylight firing is a required objective of this particular test," the announcement said.

Navy men still worked over the Vanguard. If they solved the troubles in the 72 foot rocket, they might start again tonight "counting down" the long hours of checkout toward a firing Saturday or Sunday.

It was also possible, however, the launching might be put off indefinitely.

The Pentagon said a third attempt to fire the complete three-stage rocket carrying a 6.4-inch test satellite would be rescheduled "at the earliest practicable date."

Rain Drench Cape
The troubles which cropped up suddenly in the Vanguard may have resulted from heavy rains of Thursday night. The Vanguard sat on its pad during the downpour and water may have leaked inside some vital part of the rocket. If this happened, crewmen would probably have to "dry out" the complex rocket before launching it.

Hope Finally Gets Visa to Visit Russia

By JAMES BAAR United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—Comedian Bob Hope got a visa to visit Russia by flying 3,000 miles in the wrong direction.

For days Hope cooled his heels in London waiting for permission to go to Moscow to film a television show. Finally, he gave up and flew here Wednesday to find the Soviet Embassy more than happy to grant him the visa.

"Apparently they saw my show," said Hope, who described himself as a "cultural exchange." He plans to leave for Moscow on March 14.

The fast-talking comic said his reception was entirely different from the "lot of trouble" he had at the Russian Embassy in London.

"They treated me like I was Red Skelton or Pinky Lee," he said.

Tamara Mamedov, the embassy's tall, dark cultural attaché, said Hope's visa was waiting for him in London.

"Of course we can give it to him here too," she said with a shrug. "Mr. Hope, he is too fast. Technical things are not so fast."

Hope strode up the embassy steps, smiling and chewing gum. The Russians jovially pumped his hand and led him to an ornate gold-trimmed room on the second floor of the huge Victorian embassy building. They chatted with him for nearly an hour.

"I'm a cultural exchange," he said later. "But they haven't decided what to exchange for me yet. They haven't got Mickey Mouse. They wanted me to bring Old Dad with us—that's Bing. But I said no."

Hope said he hoped to have some Russian girls in his TV show but he didn't know which ones.

"I don't know if there are any Russian 'Jayne Mansfields,'" he said. "I don't know what types they grow there."

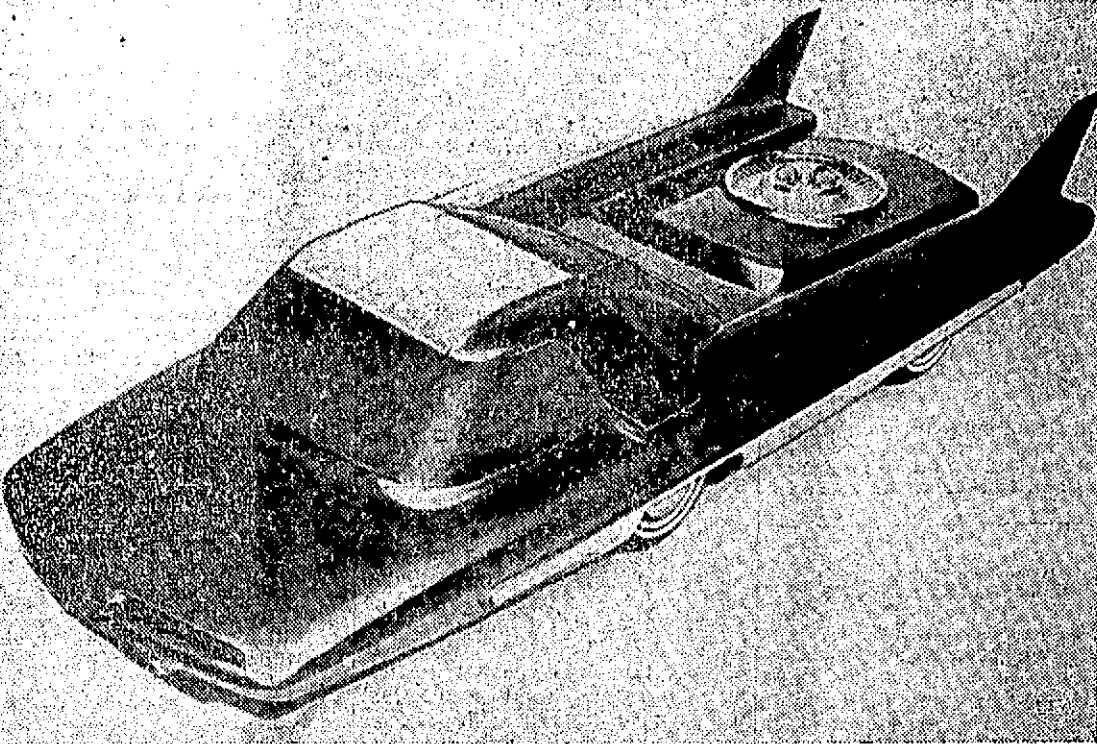

Hope popped a gold-tipped Russian cigarette in his mouth. Some one lit it for him and asked how it tasted.

"Like caviar," he said, taking another Russian cigarette with a five-inch filter from his pocket and squinting into it.

"Ah, Khrushchev's picture," he said.

THE MAIL MUST GO THROUGH (?)—Reaching mailboxes isn't easy for most rural central New Yorkers as Nick Barilo of Camillus, a suburb of Syracuse, can attest. This month's snowfall of 60.6 inches broke two records for the area—for a February and for any month. Rural mail carriers have been getting through, but it's been slow going as they battle the deep snow.

ATOM ACE AUTO—The Nucleon, a three-eighths scale model developed by Ford Motor Co., is an advanced styling conception of an atomic-powered car of the future. The stylized envision a replaceable power package available in varying sizes to enable the driver to select his own horsepower. The atomic core in the reactor at the rear of the car could be recharged periodically at charging stations which would largely replace the service station as we know it today.

Army Again Trying to Close Hospital

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Army is seeking again to close the Army and Navy Hospital at Hot Springs, Ark., on grounds the facility is not needed.

Army Sect. Wilbur M. Brucker told a House appropriations committee in testimony published Wednesday that if Congress directs the Army to keep the hospital going, it will do so.

"If not, of course, it is the intention of the Army to close it," Brucker said.

The Army said both the Public Health Service and Veterans Administration agreed with the Army there is "no requirement" for the hospital. The Army estimated $880,000 could be saved in two years if the hospital were closed.

The Army wanted to close the hospital a year ago, but Congress wrote a requirement into an appropriations bill that the installation had to be kept operating.

Rep. W. F. Narrell (D-Ark.) said he will again fight any attempt to close the hospital. He charged the Army has "channeled" patients entitled to treatment at government expense to other hospitals.

Sunday School Lesson

Our Common Christianity
By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.

Some time ago I wrote about "Many Kinds of Christians," emphasizing the varieties of religious experience and the forms of faith and practice among those formally professing to be "Christian."

I urged a greater measure of mutual trust and recognition on the part of individuals and groups toward Christians and toward the many different developments under the Christian name.

An eminent Scotch churchman expressed the belief some time ago that a great need of our times was "good controversy." I think there is much truth in that, especially if the emphasis is upon "good."

The field of religion, and of Christianity, is so vast that differences of viewpoint, attitude and opinion are inevitable in the interpretation of the Bible and the Gospel and their application to life and the nature and face of the Christian Church.

What is essential in all these differences and their expression is that all who are worthy of the name of "Christian" should not fall in love toward one another. This was the commandment of Jesus to His followers and He delieved at work on another Explorer satellite to replace the one that failed to go into orbit Wednesday.

Heavy rains drenched the Cape Thursday night, and the forecast for today was for more showers and cloudiness which might hinder tracking of the satellite rocket as it shot up from the missile test center.

On the Vanguard hung the nation's only immediate hope of putting a second "moon" into the heavens with the Army's Explorer I and the much larger Russian Sputnik II. But the 72-foot Vanguard has yet to fly successfully as a three-stage assembly and Navy men have emphasized this is the prime purpose of the coming test.

Twice Blown Up
But there was definitely a chance the 3 pound sphere would go into orbit. The Vanguard blew up when launched with a satellite in its nose Dec. 6 and Feb. 5.

The Navy's main satellite effort is not due until later this month when the Vanguard rocket will try to put a fully instrumented 21-inch satellite into orbit.

Dr. Jack Feinlich, deputy chief of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in California which designs the Army satellites and the final three solid fuel stages of the powerful Jupiter-C launching rocket, indicated meanwhile much of the hardware is already here for an Explorer just like the one that failed to go into orbit.

nounced those who called him "Lord, Lord," but did not like the things he said.

Where the commandment of love is neglected, controversy becomes an un-Christian thing, unprofitable, and subversive of the quest of truth that could only be the true purpose of controversy.

I believe that it is possible for those whose religious experiences and opinions differ to hold one another in mutual respect, confidence and love.

For over 30 years, until he died recently, my most intimate friend was an educator and author, a devout Roman Catholic, whose home background, environment, and approach to religion were almost radically different from my Methodist background and later independence.

In our years of association we met almost every week; we spoke very freely of religion; and there never was the slightest effort on the part of one to "convert" the other. If either of us was influenced, it was out of our free conversations.

As an independent Christian, it is my conviction that vital Christian experience is as eternal and everlasting as the Christ Himself. Truth in the Church and in Christian experience still attest the anvil motto:
"Hammer away, ye hostile bands;
Your hammers break, God's anvil stands."

Franks served the fruit punch and cake to the guests. Those attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Delmer Cummings, Gail and Mary Lauterback, Mrs. Harley Sisson, Mrs. Reed Beasley, Mr. Lynn Franks, Mrs. Margaret Frankland of East Palestine, Ohio, grandmother of the bride.

IS THIS THE JOB YOU ALWAYS WANTED?—It's no business, as usual, for T. H. Goddard as he relaxes with his pet cat in front of the pot-bellied stove in his general store in Winkle, Ill. Goddard has no competition. In fact he's the last businessman in town and his only problem is customers. Once a thriving town with a population of 500, Winkle now boasts only 15 homes, each renting for $8 a month. It became a near ghost town when the mine which was its chief industry shut down. Goddard is sure the mine will never reopen, but says he's been a fixture in Winkle too long to move on, and is content to run the store for the few people left.

FITS LIKE A FIDDLE—Could be that the orchestra was playing Brahms' "Lullaby" and it was just too much for a tired stagehand. In any event this bass violin case was just the right size for stagehand Joel King to use for a cat nap during a symphony concert in Ft. Meyer, Va.

DOROTHY DIX

Wife Has Him Cowed Into Neglecting Mom

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm a widow with five children — two married sons, one married daughter and two single young men at home. I'm largely dependent on my children for support. My only income is Social Security and some money I earn by doing work at home. One of the married sons, and my daughter, are wonderful to me, but the son most able to afford financial help to me is one whose wife refuses to let him assist me. She works, spends her money as she desires, has plenty of her husband's to run the house on, yet begrudges the few dollars a week he would give me. I feel awful having to take money from those who can ill afford it while the affluent one gives nothing.

MRS. R. X.
Dear Mrs. R. X.: Any woman so greedy, grasping and selfish that she begrudges her husband contributing a few dollars toward his mother's support is about as cruel and heartless as a human being can be. Someday her own son may turn back on her when she needs him. I don't have much respect, either, for a man so spineless and

Wednesday.
He said scientists "always come equipped" with a full range of spare parts for the satellite in case something goes wrong at the last minute. This evidently meant that a substitute Explorer II satellite assembly was available here at the Cape.

But other Army sources said another specially constructed Redstone missile used as the first stage of the four-stage Jupiter-C would have to be brought here from Army missile headquarters at Huntsville, Ala.

Similar Satellite Next
The source also said the Army's next satellite attempt would probably involve a satellite just like the unsuccessful Explorer II, because scientists want to prove out the mechanical parts of this one before trying a more advanced Explorer.

The Army disclosed in Washington, however, that Explorer III was already being built at JPL, but this is different from Explorer II or its substitute.

Source also disclosed in Washington that the Army plans to put up four more satellites after launching Explorer III.

The Army announced here Thursday it was "no certain" the second Explorer launched on Wednesday had failed to go into orbit due to failure of the fourth stage rocket to ignite, and had plunged back into the atmosphere and burned to a crisp from friction.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Our only son has always been an affectionate, loving boy until his marriage a year ago. Since then we have never seen him. I called at his house once, and was left standing at the door by his wife who didn't even invite me in. My husband and I are heartbroken.

KARIN F.
Dear Karin: After such evidence of lack of feeling on the part of your son and daughter-in-law, the only thing you can do is rebuild your own lives without him. Accept the fact that he's been lost to you, stop grieving and, in time, he'll come back on his own accord. There's no use trying to see him under present conditions; each failure will only make you feel more miserable.

Dear Dorothy Dix: We're two girls, 16 and 17, and live in the case is 17. Stella and I have been friends for years. Don and I dated for about a year, then broke up. In no time at all Stella had acquired him as a steady (which is OK by me) and wasted no time in calling me about it. Now she calls with minute details about every date they have. She's been so boastful about the whole thing that all our friends are fed up with her. I am beginning to dislike her and jealousy is not the reason, and don't want her for a close friend any more. Am I wrong to feel this way?

MARGA
Dear Marga: Stella's childish

Benson Charges

approved Thursday "would undo much of what we have done to reduce the surplus, (and) unless defeated, these measures mean more controls, more regulations and less freedom in farming and marketing operations."

Want, Need Freedom
He said farmers "need to be deeply concerned" that their dairy products be priced so they will be bought by consumers and not go into government storage. He said raising prices would "inevitably add new costly income-depressing surpluses to those already existing."

Benson, facing a direct challenge to his operation of present program as well as his plans for the future, said "our problem is not one of freezing agriculture in uneconomic patterns but of freeing the farmer to allow him to adjust to the rapidly changing farm economy. Farmers want and need freedom to plant, freedom to market, freedom to compute and freedom from government regulations."

WASHINGTON (UP) — The rampaging congressional farm bloc mustered its forces today for an all-out bid to wipe out Agriculture Secretary Earl Tamm Benson's House Democratic Whip Carl Albert (Okla.) told the United Press he believes Congress will send to the White House by April 1 a bill to block cuts in both price props and planting ceilings ordered by the embattled farm secretary.

attitude is best ignored. Let her enjoy her triumph while she may. You could scarcely be expected to remain close friends with anyone who isn't congenial. That's for you to decide.

Furthermore Albert said there is a "good chance" supporters of the measure could muster the two-thirds vote needed to override any presidential veto of such a bill.

Whether the administration would stand firm in the face of this onslaught remained uncertain. Reports circulated in some quarters that the President would act to ease the price support ordered by Benson.

Freeze Price Supports
The whirlwind moves to override Benson came in both Senate and House committees Thursday. Sen. Spessard L. Holland (D-Miss.) the only senator to support Benson in the maneuvering, called the action "a vote of utter lack of confidence" in Benson.

Here's what happened: —The Senate Agriculture Committee voted 12-2 to freeze all price supports and acreage allotments (planting ceilings) at not less than 1957 levels until Congress acts on long-range legislation. This would wipe out Benson's ordered cuts in dairy, wheat and feed support prices. In the absence of a new farm bill it also would block a feared shift in 1958 cotton acreage allotments and continue a special "allotment bonus" for small cotton growers. It was promptly labeled an anti-recession measure and billed for Senate action next week.

—A House Agriculture subcommittee voted 5-0 to approve a bill to reverse the dairy price support cut ordered by Benson. Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D-N.C.) said his House Agriculture Committee will take up the Senate freeze bill as soon as the Senate acts.

Bill's Major Effects
Albert said he believed the bill could be put through the House quickly. Farm congressmen put a rush label on the measure because the cut in dairy price props is slated to take effect April 1. They want the ban enacted before then.

Another major effect of the Senate bill would be to cancel a Benson-ordered 22-cent-a-bushel cut in price supports on this year's wheat crop. Speed is not so essential here because the crop does not go to market before May or June.

Albert said the cut in dairy price props, if permitted to go into effect, "would wreck dairy farmers throughout the country."

The Agriculture Department however said loss of income to dairy farmers this year from the price prop reduction would probably be less than anticipated. It said income from sales of milk and cream might go down somewhat but the dairy farmers would gain by a cut in feed costs. It also said farmers are expected to produce more milk, thus helping to prevent any sizeable income loss.

IDEA PAYS OFF—Anthony Vassallo, screw machine operator at the Kodak Apparatus and Optical Division, Rochester, N.Y., happily waves a check for $23,495. It was his reward for an idea he dropped in the company's "suggestion box" showing how a number of production operations could be combined in one machine, resulting in substantial savings. It was the largest award in Kodak's 60-year-old suggestion system and the second largest in American industry.

CHAPTER XXIII

She was staring at me with cool eyes. I could see Mrs. Owens' face. Ed had said something about getting that place in California soon and Susan Owens going to work like a ferret. This fitted in with Wales' hunting around the abandoned garage for dough. . . . except that was 10 years ago and this account was less than 10 weeks old. I asked, "Where's the other bankbook?" "Look, look, Pa rarely had one back to rub against another. That I know. And I looked carefully under everything. This is all I found," Susan said.

"I know you did, Mrs. Owens, you told me your husband said he might be able to get a farm in California soon. Are you positive he didn't have any money hidden away?"

"Do we look like rich people?" the old lady asked, her eyes beginning to water.

"Looks don't mean a thing. Did Ed at any time in the last dozen years talk about striking big money?"

"No. Never." The tears came.

"What you doing to Ma?" Susan asked.

While she was drying her face with her apron I stared at Susan, who gave it right back to me, eye-to-eye stuff. I asked, "What do you want me to do? Don't expect me to go on the hook, this is evidence and I won't—"

"We're playing it straight with you, Mr. Whittino," Susan cut in. "You were one of the detectives on the case — we're telling you about it. But Ma felt that since you're new and not boiled in oil like some of the old-timers, you'd understand what four grand means to a cop's widow scrimp- ing along on a lousy pension."

"Sure I understand. But I'm not going to hang myself. I have to turn this in."

"Nobody is asking you not to; if you have to turn the money in, you have to. Suppose we hold on to it till tomorrow I have a list of the bill numbers. You take the bankbook, see what you can find out. For all we know maybe one of Pa's nags finally came in. We've not leaving town—if we didn't want to play straight we could have kept mum about all this. If by tomorrow afternoon you feel this has something to do with the case, we'll hand it over. If you ask for it now, we'll get tough too, force you to get a court order. There, that gives you an out."

I grinned at her with admiration—she was real smart.

"I'll play along till tomorrow afternoon. But I want a list of the bills the bankbook, and a sample of your father's writing his signature if you have it handy. I'll have to call the precinct tell them something. If my lieutenant is there, you're out of luck. If not, I called and covered myself—sort of. You'll have to take that gamble."

"If you want it that way, I'll tell anybody about a court order."

I dialed the squad room. Landon answered, said Rod was gone for the day. I told him, "I'm over at Mrs. Owens' house. She's found something that might be a lead, a canceled savings bankbook that—"

"Will you never stop playing detective?" Landon asked. I tried not to sound relieved over the phone as I said, "Well, Rod knows I'm here. Tell him I'll check on it in the morning and be in touch with him. It may be important."

Susan handed me the list of serial numbers and dropped two large envelopes on the table. I picked a couple of fifties from the pile for a spot check as Susan said, "You have a real trusting nature."

"Just careful." The bills checked with the list. "Put the money in one of the envelopes and don't play with it. Speaking of money, Mrs. Owens, did the

Troops to Stay, Ike Declares

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower said Wednesday the federal government must continue to pay $3,500 a day to keep federal troops in Little Rock, Ark., "to make certain that the federal courts cannot be defied successfully."

The President made the statement at a news conference as the Army revealed military operations at Central High School cost $4,237,996 between Sept. 24 and Jan. 31.

The figures, given in closed-door testimony to a House appropriations subcommittee, do not include $813,073 in normal costs which the Army said it would have incurred whether or not the troops were on duty in Little Rock. The Army broke down the Little Rock costs this way: $3,624,461 for the federalized Arkansas National Guard, $117,823 for the regular Army troops, and $435,712 for Air Force transportation of the troops to Little Rock.

Eisenhower told a news conference Jan. 15 that all troops would be withdrawn from Central High as soon as Little Rock officials "express their confident intention of maintaining order" at the school. But today he said "as long as there is any cost that is entailed to make certain that the federal courts cannot be defied successfully, we have to bar the cost."

The President sent Army paratroopers and federalized National Guardsmen to the school last September to enforce a court order to desegregate Central. A contingent of Arkansas National Guardsmen are still on duty at the school.

Mayor of Stamps Attacked, Beaten

STAMPS (UP)—The 63-year-old Mayor of this Lafayette county town was taken to a Shreveport, La., hospital with a possible skull fracture and other injuries after two men attacked him in his office late Thursday.

Sheriff W. H. (Buck) Baker said Mayor Frank Burke was accosted by two men who left him lying on the floor and bleeding.

Later, police arrested Andy Winter, 23, and W. S. Dickson, 48. Both were held on an open charge pending a conference between Baker and County Prosecutor Travis Mathis.

The mayor had just returned to his office after convalescing from a heart ailment.

W. S. Walters, who occupied an adjoining office, heard the commotion, and went into the mayor's office. He said he did not witness the beating, but saw the men as they fled. He said they apparently had been drinking.

The sheriff said both men had previously threatened the mayor and the city marshal, and that both had been arrested on drunkenness charges.

Melbourne Sawmill Worker Is Killed

MELBOURNE (UP)—A 45-year-old Izard county sawmill worker was killed in an accident a mile west of here early today.

Sheriff Elmer Fudge identified the victim as Fillmore Hodges, who lives near Melbourne. Fudge said Hodges crawled under a woodpulp conveyor at a sawmill to pick up a piece of lumber and was struck on the head by the end of a crossie.

late Mrs. Wales ever mention money. Did she seem well fixed?"

"Indeed not. They lived on the upper West Side in a cheap apartment house. She and Al were very happy. He never once complained about her delicate condition or the doctor bills."

I thought of Rose and her little man-and-wife private world.

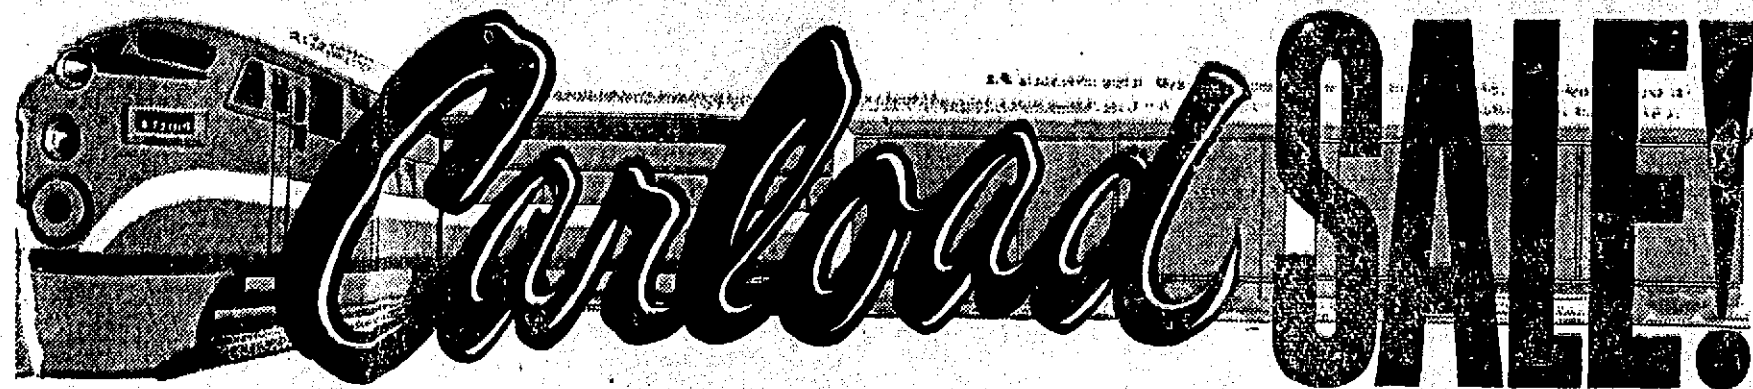

"Never saw them have a fight," the old lady went on. "And when poor Dora took real sick back in 1940, Al saw to it she had only the best, even though he knew it was hopeless. They must have saved during the years — like I said they never lived well, and all their savings went for these big doctors."

"Recall the name of any of them?" I asked.

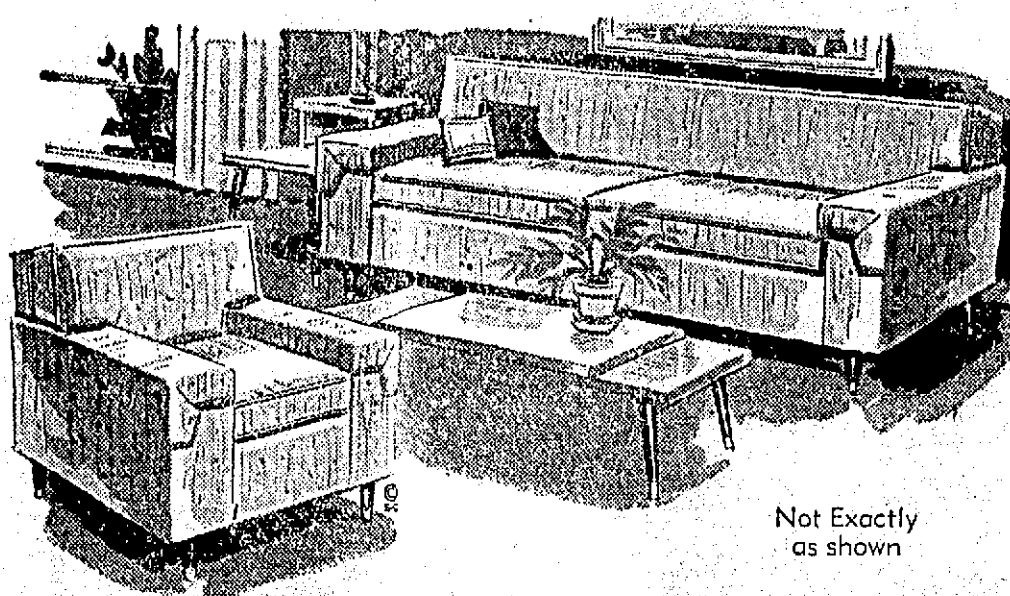

Mrs. Owens turned her moon puss toward the ceiling in thought. "Yes, I do. Because I once had to take Dora over to Park Avenue for X-ray treatments when Al was stuck on a case. It was Seventy-ninth and Park and I remember because it was the first time I was ever in that rich section, and the doctor, he had the same name as the ballplayer, Di Maggio."

I took the envelope, sealed it, and wrote across the flap. "Keep this shut and don't finger the money, might still raise prints on the bills." I gave it back to Susan. "I'm not kidding, don't open this envelope and don't lose it." I took the second envelope and using my nails, peeled the remains of the tape from the drawer, dropped them in the envelope and pocketed it. "Might get prints from this too. If you haven't smuggled it too much." I took the drawer, looked around, and put it behind the piano. "Leave this here, don't let anybody touch it. More possible prints."
